The novel opens with Aunt Polly scouring the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects sadly on Tom’s misdeeds and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at suppertime. He is told that he must hold his hands over his head and show her that his clothes are still very clean, but still, Tom’s half-brother, Mark, has woken the cat himself to disguise his hands. Aunt Polly is satisfied, and Tom goes out into the street to play and eventually chases the newcomes all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his dirty clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Jim passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Jim almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.

She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects matter-of-factly on Tom's mischief and how the boys got away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. He is a poor fellow, spending his last four dollars to go to the circus. He has been skipping school that morning and spent his money on two oranges and a half dozen chocolate lollipops. His clothes are still wet from the rain, but at least Tom’s half brother, Ben, has washed the dishes.

Tom and the new arrival each have a bite of pie and tea, both heartily. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has sworn the boy to secrecy. He has heard the boys the whole time.

Tom goes out of the house to repair a window and is whistling. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he sees a blackboard and enlists and eventually becomes the new comer at the other house.

As we proceed to the lower end of the gorge through which the Columbia passes through the Cascade mountains, we notice across the river, in the state Washington, the so-called Cape Horn, also called Gibraltar.

Rev. Gustavus Hines wrote about a third “Cape Horn” in 1843, with this Cape Horn being a “low point of land”. Its location quite possibly is today’s Cape Horn Landing, just east of the basalt feature of that name. At twelve o'clock, we passed a low point of land which has received the name of Cape Horn, in consequence of the difficulty of the navigation of this part of the river arising ...

The road is dry, dusty and often, rough as guts, but driving the Cape York Peninsula is one hell of a road trip. It’s about 1000km from Cairns to Cape York, which isn’t a big distance when we’re talking about a country the size of Australia.
