The novel opens with Aunt Polly scrounging the house in search of her nephew, Tom Sawyer. She finds him in the closet, discovers that his hands are covered with jam, and prepares to give him a whipping. Tom cries out theatrically, “Look behind you!” and when Aunt Polly turns, Tom escapes over the fence. After Tom is gone, Aunt Polly reflects carefully on Tom’s mischievousness and how she lets him get away with too much.

Tom comes home at supper time. He has run away from school and broken his collar bone. “I was whipped at school that afternoon and went right over the fence. I don’t like school,” he says. Aunt Polly is satisfied. Tom has learned to disguise his guilt.

Tom goes out of the house in the evening. He is still a little hungry and thirsty. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, he meets a man in a dhoti and a turban. Tom and the new arrival soon make up and eventually chase the newcomer all the way home.

When he returns home in the evening, Tom finds Aunt Polly waiting for him. She notices his soiled clothes and resolves to make him work the next day, a Saturday, as punishment.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Tom passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “white alley,” a kind of marble. Aunt Polly agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his thoughts.

Tom comes home at supper time. Aunt Polly has just cooked a special meal to celebrate Tom’s return from the farm. She tells him how much she missed him during his absence. Aunt Polly was worried that Tom might skip school while he was away. Tom assures her that he won’t miss a single class and promises to be the best student in the whole school. Aunt Polly is satisfied.

Tom goes out of the house to wait for a message from his friend, Huckleberry Finn. While wandering the streets of St. Petersburg, Tom meets the new arrival in town, a young boy who seems to be lost. Tom offers to help him and eventually chases the newcomers all the way home.

On Saturday morning, Aunt Polly sends Tom out to whitewash the fence. Sam passes by, and Tom tries to get him to do some of the whitewashing in return for a “whale alley,” a kind of mustard. Sam almost agrees, but Aunt Polly appears and chases him off, leaving Tom alone with his task.
Requirements Analysis And System Design

Strong analysis and design are crucial in the successful development of any enterprise information system. This book will teach you the underlying theory behind designing large-scale object-oriented systems and will show you how to put this theory into practice.
